

Programs funded in the 2016 Grants Round

The Victorian Legal Services Board has provided $3.032 million in funding to 16 projects through the 2016 Grants Round:

Applicants	Project Name	Project Description	Amount	Length
Friends of Castlemaine Library	Read-Along Dads and literacy programs	The project consists of two complementary parts: first 'Read-Along Dads' which keeps the men in touch with their children through recording a children's audio book, which is sent to their child together with a copy of the book, and secondly, a literacy program consisting of book groups, creative writing, craft sessions and events. One aim of the program is to improve the prisoners' and their children's social and emotional health and literacy. As well, the program seeks to improve chances of prisoner rehabilitation through connection with their family.	$45,000	2.5 years
Loddon Campaspe Community Legal Centre	Tipping the Scales – Improving justice outcomes in Central Goldfields through collective impact	The project will deliver a multi-faceted approach to identifying and impacting poor justice related outcomes for children, youth and families in Victoria's Central Goldfields area, centring on Maryborough. It will be founded on established networks and institutions, including the Go Goldfields Alliance, and build targeted partnerships with key agencies (including Victoria Police, Victoria Legal Aid, the Centre for Non Violence) to mobilise collective expertise and capacities. The project recognises that working with existing place-based structures is the most appropriate means to design and deliver effective, integrated responses.	$571,282	3 years
Victorian Aboriginal Legal Service Co-operative Limited	Your life, Your choice	The project will contribute to reducing family conflict in Aboriginal communities by reducing disputes about decision making for relatives with cognitive impairment. Members of Aboriginal communities will gain: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Increased awareness of the role and responsibilities of substitute decision makers.</li> <li>• Increased ability to control their futures through exercising their right to choose who will make decisions for them if, in the future, they become unable to make decisions. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people with disability will have improved awareness of their ability to appoint someone to support them to make decisions.</li> </ul>	$133,000	1 year

Monash University	Improving educational outcomes for children with a disability in Victoria	The Castan Centre for Human Rights Law will review all laws, policies, procedures and practices regulating the education of children with a disability in Victoria's schools. It will produce recommendations for the Department of Education and Training (DET) detailing the reforms necessary to ensure that all relevant documents and practices comply with Victoria's Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006. The project addresses recent research showing that many children with a disability are inadequately supported in schools, leading to poor educational outcomes and entrenched disadvantage throughout their lives. The DET is a key supporter of this project.	$104,638	1.5 years
Deakin University	Evaluating the effectiveness of the new mechanisms in the Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic)	The Equal Opportunity Act 2010 (Vic) is the most modern anti-discrimination law in Australia and contains many innovative mechanisms. This project will evaluate the effectiveness of those mechanisms in addressing the problems with the predecessor Act that the Investigator identified in earlier research and assess the extent to which problems that were not addressed by the 2010 reforms remain. This will be achieved through a combination of case analysis and empirical expert interview data. The project will develop recommendations for increasing the Act's ability to tackle discrimination.	$23,886	1.5 years
Springvale Monash Legal Service Inc.	Sporting Change	This two year project aims to prevent youth contact with the justice system by integrating legal education and sport-based engagement strategies. Protective factors for youth will be increased through continuing engagement with education and training, and risk factors minimised. The project will be based at Narre Warren South P-12 to maximise engagement and skill development opportunities for at-risk youth.	$276,927	2 years
Inclusion Melbourne	The Right to be Heard: Providing Equal Access To the Law for People with Cognitive and Communicative Impairment	People with intellectual disability are more likely to be the victims of crime and less likely to report them. This project includes a best practice guide for the legal system and an easy English information guide for people with intellectual disability and will outline the human rights defined by law, practical strategies to reduce barriers and additional resources.	$38,830	1 year

Victorian Bar Incorporated	Duty Barristers' Scheme Online Portal	The Victorian Bar operates a Duty Barristers' Scheme (the Scheme) that provides pro bono assistance to parties and witnesses before the courts. There are approximately 290 barristers currently participating and providing pro bono services valued at an estimated $350,000-$450,000 per annum. The project is to implement an online referral and allocation portal to increase administrative efficiency and to broaden the reach of the Scheme to assist more members of the community in need of legal representation and encourage more of our members to participate in the Scheme. The online portal will initially be developed for all Office of Public Prosecution referrals. Phase 2 will expand the portal's operation to the Magistrates' Court, County Court, Supreme Court and Court of Appeal programs.	$53,818	1 year
Federation University Australia	What are the support and communication requirements of people with complex communication needs when interacting with the criminal and civil justice system?	The research seeks to identify strategies to assist justice agencies (civil and criminal) to enhance their response to people with complex communication needs. Data collection methods include interviews with people with complex communication needs (victims, offenders, and those interacting with tribunals: VCAT and VoCAT), focus group with advocates and case file analysis. Data will be gathered from across Victoria. The research will be informed by the direct experiences of this cohort in their interaction with the justice system. These experiences will provide further insight about adjustments available to justice agencies in order to enhance access to justice for this cohort.	$57,270	2 years
Banyule Community Health	Yarning Up Law	This three year project, in partnership with the Indigenous Peoples' Gathering Place and Banyule City Council, focuses on the development of culturally safe and sustainable legal service pathways for Indigenous communities, particularly in regard to child protection matters. The project will build the capacity of the generalist Victorian legal assistance sector to share and continually learn about respectful strategies to better engage Indigenous Peoples in mainstream services. This will ensure that access to justice for Indigenous Peoples is significantly improved.	$366,890	3 years

Swinburne University of Technology	Effective judicial supervision of offender rehabilitation project	Reforms to Victorian sentencing law have increased the potential for judicial supervision (JS) to improve offender rehabilitation. There is no research on whether or how these reforms are being applied in practice nor is there guidance for when and how judicial officers might undertake JS. This project's unique partnership between the Centre for Forensic Behavioural Science and the Magistrates' Court of Victoria, will improve the consistency and quality of JS practice by identifying current practice, developing a JS practice framework that is informed by forensic behavioural science, conducting judicial education about this framework and identifying future judicial education needs.	$47,893	1 year
Jesuit Social Services	Best Practice In Recidivism Reduction through improving access to education, training and employment – An Action Research Project	This Action Research Project will improve access to education, training and employment for people on community corrections orders as a means to reduce recidivism, increase our understanding of the personal and systemic barriers to people achieving positive training and employment outcomes, and provide an empirical basis to advocate policies and initiatives that foster systemic change. It will complement recidivism initiatives in the City of Brimbank and inform improvements in these interventions over the life of the project.	$387,800	3 years
Justice Connect	Not-for-profit Law - supporting long-term sustainability of Victorian community organisations	This project will support the long-term sustainability of Victorian not-for-profit community organisations by providing them with free/low-cost legal help, advocating improving their legal and regulatory landscape, and collaborating with other services that are integral to supporting a sustainable sector. Using Not-for-profit Law's (NFP Law) acclaimed model, they will equip organisations to navigate myriad complex legal and related issues in a 'new world order', including social enterprise, social impact investment, innovative fundraising approaches and community service funding reforms. Over the next three years, they will build the capacity of Victorian community organisations to adapt and thrive in a rapidly-changing environment.	$412,657	3 years
